"Dallas has numerous arenas in the area to accommodate the playoff games, highlighted by the American Airlines Center while also having eight Dallas Stars Centers for teams to host camps and practices. The Dallas Stars and the Dallas Sports Commission also have a great working relationship and had a positive experience in working with the NHL to host the NHL Draft in 2018 and a wildly successful NHL Winter Classic in January 2020. We're centrally located, have great accommodations, restaurants and entertainment options for the players and their families. Then, you add in the two major airports in DFW International serving as the home of American Airlines and Dallas Love Field serving as the home for Southwest Airlines. After those amazing assets, you then add on, what I think is, our greatest strength which is how our community embraces the opportunity for the support and provides that extra Texas hospitality" -- Dallas Sports Commissioner Exec Dir Monica Paul.
